WHAT IS P2P

A peer-to-peer network is a basic setup of interconnected computers, originating in the late 1970s. In this network, each computer serves as a node, facilitating file sharing among the connected devices. Unlike traditional networks with a central server, there is no single central server in a peer-to-peer network. Instead, each node functions as a server, enabling the exchange of vast amounts of data. Tasks within the network are evenly distributed among the nodes, ensuring each node carries an equal workload. The network remains operational as long as at least one node is active, as each node operates independently.

CROWD FUNDING

Crowdfunding involves gathering small sums of money from a large group of people to fund a new business endeavor. It leverages the widespread reach of social media and crowdfunding platforms to connect investors and entrepreneurs, thereby broadening the pool of potential backers beyond the conventional network of owners, family, and venture capitalists. This approach has the potential to boost entrepreneurship by providing access to funding from a diverse range of sources.

At its core, crowdfunding thrives on the principle of inclusivity and community engagement. By harnessing the reach of social media and specialized crowdfunding platforms, entrepreneurs can connect directly with potential backers, sharing their vision, and rallying support for their projects.
